NEW ARMIES REACH STALINGRAD

REINFORCEMENTS FOR BOTH SIDES

AIR-BORNE reserves continue to arrive for the assault on Stalingrad, where the defenders still hold the great factory belt in the north-west of the city, as well as key positions in most of the streets.

Relief armies are slowly forging their way to the relief of the beleaguered garrison, and Reuter's Correspondent states that north-west and south of the city both armies are improving their positions daily.

There is little news from other fronts; but in the Caucasus the Germans claim the capture of a small town south of the Terek.

LITTLE PROGRESS IN CAUCASUS

MOSCOW, Wednesday—Reuter's Correspondent here says:—"A week has passed since Herr Hitler's promise that Stalingrad would be captured, but its garrison still defies the German assaults. They are battering vainly against the factory forts in the northern suburbs, where the Russians have already beaten off two heavy assaults by 30,000 troops, over 100 tanks, and 1,000 'planes. One German unit managed to gain a foothold inside the workers' settlement, but before it could consolidate its new position Soviet troops drove it out again.

REINFORCEMENTS

"The Germans are bringing up battalion after battalion of reserves in troop-carrying 'planes. The Soviet High Command is maintaining comparative silence about the Red Army's relief offensive north and south of Stalingrad, merely stating that the Soviet troops are "conducting active operations," but front despatches make it clear that the offensive north-west of the city is continuing to press forward in most sectors. The Red Air Force has now been reinforced in this sector and is giving the ground troops strong support.

"In the North Caucasus the Red Army is holding its own. There are signs that the Germans are making a large-scale thrust to gain their two objectives—control of the whole Black Sea littoral and capture of the Grozny oilfields. Since the Germans captured Novorossisk they have been trying to batter their way south without progressing more than a mile or two, and in the Mozdok area the Germans have advanced about ten miles at the most."

Reuter's Stockholm Correspondent says: "Stalingrad's position is more favourable to-day than could have been hoped a week ago, but the city is by no means out of danger. There is yet no sign that Marshal von Hoth has reached the end of his reserves, and observers are convinced that the Germans will continue to assault the town as long as they have one soldier left.

"The Russians have received strong reinforcements in the north, where they are battering against the German Panzer screen to establish contact with the garrison.

"The main news from the Caucasus is the German claim to have captured Melgobek, a town south of the Terek. It is clear that the Germans have made some progress, but they are still fighting in much the same areas as a month ago."

GERMAN CLAIMS

LONDON, Wednesday.—The German News Agency stated to-night: "Marshal Timoshenko is endeavouring to relieve Stalingrad by exerting strong pressure south of the great Volga elbow, and from the north between the Don and Volga, with reserves drawn from other parts of the Soviet Union. He is evidently attempting to cut the German lines of communication." The Agency also said that Stalingrad's Dzherzhinsky tractor works, stated to be the greatest in the Soviet Union, has been reduced to a pile of ruins by German artillery, and that German troops inside Stalingrad are now near the main railway station.—(Reuter.)

SOVIET COMMUNIQUE

MOSCOW, Wednesday. — To-night's Soviet communiqué states: "During October 7 our troops fought the enemy in the areas of Stalingrad and Mozdok. No material changes took place on other fronts.

"In the Stalingrad area fierce fighting continued. Enemy tank and infantry attacks were repulsed. Soviet troops are holding their former positions. During the day 800 Germans were annihilated.

"In the area of Mozdok Soviet troops fought stubborn engagements with tanks and motorised infantry. In one sector twelve tanks penetrated into rear of one Soviet unit. Eleven tanks were destroyed and one company wiped out. On another sector a Soviet unit, after fierce fighting, withdrew to new lines of defence.

"South-east of Novorossisk Soviet troops inflicted considerable losses on Rumanian divisions newly arrived at the front. Several battalions were routed and booty captured."—Reuter.

DIRECTOR TO PAY £6,855

ENNIS COMPANY'S POSITION

DISTRICT JUSTICE GLEESON at Ennis yesterday gave his decision in the case in which Walter Chapman, director of L. Jordan, Ltd., proprietors of Ennis Braid Mills, had been charged, on two counts, with fraudulent evasion of Customs duties.

He found the first charge proved and ordered the defendant to pay £6,855 18s. 6d. to the Revenue authorities; he dismissed the second charge, that of making a false declaration for the purpose of evading Customs duties.

Mr. Dixon, K.C., for the State, did not apply for costs, and the Justice, on the application of Mr. J. A. Costello, K.C., for the defendant, allowed four months to pay, as counsel said, considering the matter from the point of view of an appeal.

PERFECTLY SOUND

Mr. J. M. FitzGerald, K.C., in reference to the charges against the company, said it was not involved in any of the transactions, which had been found to be the fault of Mr. Chapman. It was a matter of intense pity and regret that such things should have occurred in this company, which started its life, under Mr. Chapman's tutelage, with every hope of success. It was a happy thing that, notwithstanding these divagations, it was perfectly sound, and, he hoped, would remain as prosperous as it had been in the past.

It was not, he submitted, liable to penalty in respect of the acts of Mr. Chapman, which, being not exactly criminal, were quasi-criminal, and he asked the Justice to accept the ordinary rule of law, as modified by the special facts of the case, that a principal was not liable in a quasi-criminal matter for the acts of his agent without his express connivance.

Mr. Dixon replied that nobody could have any doubt that the acts of Mr. Chapman were for the benefit of the company.

Mr. FitzGerald said that the company was prepared to pay the duty, irrespective of these proceedings, and it amounted to £848 14s.

Mr. Dixon said that offer would have an important bearing on the whole question of penalties.

The Justice adjourned the case for a month, and said he would be prepared to state a case for the High Court without coming to any determination in the District Court.

NO PERSONAL GAIN

Mr. E. Monaghan, solicitor, said he realised he had no status, but he desired to emphasise that, in all these transactions, no personal profit accrued to Mr. Chapman.

The Justice said that was correct, and no allegation had been made to the contrary. Mr. Chapman had not made any personal profit out of these proceedings, certainly not more than any other shareholder of the company.

Mr. Gleeson acknowledged the help he had received from counsel on both sides, and counsel paid tribute to the Justice's great dignity, kindness, consideration and efficient conduct of the case.

DIPLOMATIC VISITORS

Two distinguished visitors who have arrived in Dublin this week are Senor Don Atilano Carnevali, Venezuelan and Chilean Minister in London, and Mr. Abel Botero, First Secretary of the Colombian Legation in London.

Senor Carnevali was Minister of Finance in Venezuela from 1936 to 1937. As a student in Caracas University he interested himself in the movement of the Democratic Party, and when the Government of President Gomez came into power in 1927 he joined thousands of other Venezuelans in exile, which he spent in Washington, United States of America, Porto Rico, and Dominican Republic. "This visit is a childhood dream of mine," he told an Irish Times reporter last night, adding that the cultural and religious ties between his country and Eire were very close. After the war, he hopes, a commercial interchange between the countries may be arranged.

Mr. Botero, who was Secretary to President Lopez, of Columbia, from 1934 to 1937, began his career as a solicitor, and afterwards became a journalist on El Espectador. Entering the Diplomatic Service, he was First Secretary in Paris, and then was transferred to his present post in London.

TO PUNISH WAR CRIMES

COMMISSION TO BE SET UP

A United Nations' Commission to investigate war crimes is to be set up with the least possible delay. It will direct its attention particularly to organised atrocities, including those perpetrated in occupied France or on the orders of the Germans.

Viscount Simon, the Lord Chancellor of Britain, made this announcement in the House of Lords yesterday, and a corresponding statement, he said, was being issued in Washington by the President of the United States. The proposal had been communicated to the other Allied nations.

1,000 DIE IN SUNK TRANSPORT

Paris Radio, quoting a Tokyo despatch, claimed last night that more than 1,000 British prisoners of war perished when the Japanese transport Lisbon Maru was torpedoed in the South China Sea.—(Reuter.)

According to an announcement by the British War Office last night, the Japanese wireless has broadcast a statement that a number of British and Australian prisoners of war lost their lives when a Japanese ship was sunk by a submarine in the China Sea on October 1.

EXECUTIONS IN NORWAY

Fifteen more persons were executed in Norway yesterday, after being condemned to death by court-martial at Trondheim, the Oslo radio announced last night. Two others were each sentenced to ten years' hard labour.

S.S. General Reddiess, German police chief in Norway, who issued the announcement of the executions, said that the sentences were passed by virtue of the state of emergency. "An appeal for mercy was refused," he added.

IRISH SHIPPING'S WAR RISK SCHEME

INSURANCE BROKERS INTERVIEWED

THE announcement in the "Irish Times" yesterday of the launching, by Irish Shipping, Ltd., of a scheme to cover war risks for cargoes carried across the North Atlantic in the company's vessels, officially confirmed last night, created a flutter in importing circles and unusual activity in brokers' offices.

In an official statement, Irish Shipping, Ltd., confirmed the undertaking, and intimated that, in addition to its normal activities, the company now is offering to underwrite war risks on cargoes carried in their ships on the same terms as those offered by underwriters at Lloyds.

"Since the outbreak of war," the company says, "substantial sums in the form of war-risk insurance premiums have been exported, as, heretofore, there was no home market for any class of marine insurance. The scheme is being well received by brokers and cargo interests.

"MONOPOLY"

"There is one particular field of insurance in which Irish Shipping, Ltd., have a complete monopoly; but it is a monopoly which was thrust upon the company. No other underwriter wants the business. Cargo-owners, importing goods via Lisbon, found that the war risks cover which they had effected in the open market expired fifteen days after the arrival of the goods at the port of transhipment, and cover subsequent to that period could not be obtained in the open market. Following representations by cargo-owners to the Government, Irish Shipping, Ltd., agreed to undertake this form of insurance. We understand that a considerable volume of business has been, and is still being, transacted with the company which remains the only market available to our importers for this particular insurance.

"The company has effected considerable saving by carrying war-risks insurance on their own vessels. They undertook this step at a time when rates in the open market were at such a level that war risks insurance premiums on the fleet for a full year would have involved expenditure of close on £1,000,000—all of which would have gone abroad. Their initiative and enterprise has been rewarded, for they have been singularly fortunate in their operations to date."

BIG UNDERTAKING

An Irish Times reporter, who approached a number of insurance brokers yesterday, found them reluctant, generally, to discuss the scheme but it was admitted that a considerable amount of money was involved and that it was a big undertaking. The head of one large firm said that the scheme had vision, and he would not like to be critical of it. It might, he suggested, collapse after the war, or, on the other hand, it might expand into nationalisation of insurance which would be likely to affect seriously their business.

Questioning the statement that the cover created by Irish Shipping, Ltd., would be identical with that effected with Lloyds Underwriters or Marine Insurance Corporation, another broker pointed out that the Institute Strikes Clauses were not included, and there would be the anomaly of a contract, underwritten by neutrals, being subject to the United Kingdom and Allied clauses, mandatory on all British war policies, and warranting the policy free of any claim arising from capture, seizure, arrest, restraint, detention by the Government of the United Kingdom or any of its Allies. It was obvious, he said, that before the Eire importer could consider the new undertaking a great insurance scheme, a specimen form of policy should be available for inspection and the anomaly of Irish Shipping, Ltd's, Lisbon Land War scheme not repeated. In the interests of clarification, the policy form for the new scheme should be reproduced in the public press without delay.

"NOTEWORTHY"

Commenting on the fact that the scheme will, at present, apply only to war risks on cargoes carried by Eire flag boats on the Atlantic run, he observed that, at the moment, if there was any difficulty about deciding the cause of loss, the underwriters for the marine side of the contract and those for war risks were prepared to make payments on a fifty-fifty basis.

"As Irish Shipping, Limited," he continued, "is not a properly constituted marine underwriting unit within the meaning of the 1906 Act, it is hardly likely that British underwriters of the marine side of the contract will be as accommodating as they always have been found to be when both types of risks were underwritten in the English market. As a corollary, it would seem that Eire importers will have to lie out of their money for indefinite periods and with no past knowledge to help them estimate either when or by whom they will be paid. In this connection, it is noteworthy that there have been no losses giving rise to a claim on Irish Shipping, Limited, Spanish or Portuguese land war policies.

"Heretofore, the marine part of the contract, as distinct from the war, has been rated very low, as British underwriters were largely subsidising the marine account from the war account. It is reasonable to assume, therefore, that marine rates will be substantially increased where the war contract is not placed with the British market, and, as the institute strikes clauses will also have to be covered for those prudent importers who are satisfied with nothing less than the fullest cover available, it is difficult to see what real saving the implementing of this scheme will mean in Eire landed cost of imports.

"The tone of the article in the Irish Times suggests that Eire has been discriminated against by British underwriters. To anyone in possession of the full facts this is, of course, absurd. It is also ungrateful, as without the facilities of the Lloyd's and British companies' markets, Eire imports on the scale of the last few years would not have been possible. It is not correct to say that it was only in the last six months that the rate for Eire flag boats on the Atlantic run was reduced in respect of war risks on cargoes to bring them into line with United Kingdom rating. As far back as the 12th November, 1941, Eire flag boats plying from North and Central America and the West Indies were rated at 7½ per cent. for cargo war risks. This rate held until the publication of the Advisory Schedule No. 48, issued by Lloyds and the Institute of London Underwriters in respect of war and strikes, riots and civil commotions risks rates, and dated the 22nd April, 1942. The rates North and Central America and West Indies to West and South Coast of the United Kingdom (not east of Southampton) to Northern Ireland and Eire were thereby increased to £10 per cent. Also, this rate continued to be shown up to Schedule No. 56, dated 18th September, 1942, although between and since these dates it has been possible to place limited amounts at 7½ per cent. on the London market. So that the trend back to a 7½ per cent. rate was in being before this new departure of Irish Shipping, Limited, was known. Actually, the existing London war rate on Eire flag trans-Atlantic cargoes at 7½ per cent. buys wider cover than the Irish Shipping, Limited, rate of 7½ per cent.

"Frankly, it is felt that the combined Lloyd's 'All Risks,' war strikes, riots and civil commotions rate will be lower than Irish Shipping, Limited, war rate, plus Lloyd's marine rate and strikes, riots and civil commotions rate. One should remember when talking about marine rates that particular average, etc., losses are more likely to be large when goods are carried on vessels already old and, in some cases, not built for the Atlantic, or even general cargo, trade."

MONEY SENT HOME

Irish emigrants in Britain sent £2,600,000 to Eire in 1941, compared with £600,000 in each of the years 1937, 1938 and 1939.

The amount received in Eire from emigrants in other countries besides Britain has decreased from £2,422,000 in 1937 to £1,257,000 in 1941.

CENTRAL BANK BILL

PROGRESS IN SENATE

After a preliminary effort to remove from the Central Bank Bill the provision imposing a statutory obligation on the Minister for Finance to appoint on the Board three nominees of the commercial banks, the Senate yesterday devoted a long sitting to 47 amendments on the Committee stage of the measure.

Sir JOHN KEANE, defending the principle of bankers' representation, said that surely they would all agree that the primary interest of the bankers was the safeguarding of the money entrusted to them by depositors. They held, roughly, £250,000,000 deposits of the people.

Announcing that he did not propose to accept the amendment, the MINISTER FOR FINANCE (Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly) said that they thought it wise that banking directors who had knowledge of this country's financial history, system and requirements should be included on the Board of the Central Bank. So far as the interests of the savings of their people were concerned, their banking system had been a success. They had safeguarded the interests of their depositors to an extent that had hardly a parallel in the history of finance in modern times.

There was a long debate about the Government's ability to safeguard the integrity of the currency, and ensure that currency and credit should be issued in correct equation to the economic needs of maximum production and full employment.

"FANTASTIC"

SIR JOHN KEANE asked how a central bank was going to arrange that currency would be adequate for full employment and production. If it was suggested that the Government should take steps to ensure employment he could understand it. The banking system only came into the matter indirectly, for the central bank had no power to start work, drain bogs, or make roads. The first step surely was a loan, and, if it was a sound financial proposition, the Government could secure it from the savings of the people. To suggest that the commercial banks were responsible for all the trouble to-day was fantastic. The banks did not lend a penny more than they got from their depositors.

The Senate then adjourned till 5 to-day.

LICENSING BILL

TRADERS MEET MINISTER

The confiscation of vested interests was the description of proposals in the new Licensing Bill given by a deputation of the Licensed Grocers' and Vintners' Association in a conference with the Minister for Justice, Mr. G. Boland, yesterday. The proposals so described were those dealing with the abolition of the week-day bona-fide trade.

In an interview after the conference, which lasted two hours, Mr. C. E. Beddin, secretary of the association, said that the deputation had stated to the Minister that the authorities had not taken sufficient action to stop abuses of the bona-fide laws. Penalties inflicted on offenders had been small. It should be possible to devise a system whereby abuses would be removed and legitimate needs would be satisfied. There was considerable legitimate bona-fide travelling by farmers and their employés to fairs and markets. There would be no moral support in rural areas for these "sweeping proposals." In the winter they would prove a great hardship if applied, and illegal trading might increase as a result. The efforts to foster the tourist trade would largely be frustrated and the dullness of country life would be increased.

Proposals put to the Minister included the ending of bona-fide trading at 1 a.m. in summer and 12 midnight in winter, outside certain resorts, compensation to be paid by the State to traders for the hours lost.

LONDON OPINION OF ROUAULT

IF the painting "Christ and the Soldier" was to be sold in London to-day it would fetch substantially more than the £400 paid for it. This is the opinion, expressed last night, says our London correspondent, of Mr. George Brown, director of the Leicester Galleries, who sold the picture to the Irish art-lovers on behalf of a private collector who was dispersing.

EXPERT'S SURPRISE

"I am surprised," commented Mr. Brown. "I should have thought Rouault was too famous for this to happen at this time of the day. Ten or fifteen years ago, of course, when his work was not so well known, it might have been different. It is a very desirable picture, indeed, and I am sorry that Dublin art lovers will not see it. Rouault is world-famous, and this picture was very much admired in London some time ago when it was exhibited with a collection of French paintings. Rouault's 'Ecce Homo' is at Campion Hall, the Jesuit House of Studies at Oxford. His 'Crucifixion' and some other pictures have been reproduced in the Catholic Herald.

"Just before the war a very famous expert was engaged on a very exhaustive work on Rouault which was to be printed in Paris. We never got the volume, however and presume that the war interfered with its production. As regards Mr. Sean Keating's complaint that the Friends of the National Collections had bought from a dealer and not from a painter, my answer is: 'You can't buy direct from Rouault.'"

THE REFUSAL

There is a possibility that the question of the refusal of the picture will be brought up again before the Advisory Committee of the Dublin Municipal Gallery, an Irish Times reporter was informed last night.

The committee consists of nine members of the Corporation and six other persons who represent expert opinion on the arts. These six are: Dr. George Furlong, Director of the National Gallery; Mr. John Keating, R.H.A.; Mr. John Maher, Mr. Dermod O'Brien, P.R.H.A.; Miss Sarah Purser, R.H.A., and Mr. Lucius O'Callaghan, R.H.A. Of these Mr Keating and Mr. O'Brien have already expressed their opinions in the Irish Times. Dr. Furlong, Mr. Maher and Mr. O'Callaghan said they would prefer not to say anything on the subject.

Miss Purser, who is one of the senior members of the R.H.A., said that she had not been able to attend the meeting at which the Rouault picture had been offered. She did not wish to express an opinion on its merits, but she recalled that Sir Hugh Lane—to whom the Municipal Gallery owed most of its valuable pictures—had been in the thick of controversies all his life. Many people had said that the pictures Lane was buying were worthless, but time had proved that he was right.

She also thought that greater consideration should be given to the opinions of the Friends of the National Collections, which was the body instrumental in persuading the Cosgrave Government to grant Charlemont House for use as a municipal gallery, and which had given the gallery most of its important acquisitions in recent years.

No date has yet been fixed for the public exhibition of the painting.

DUKE'S 'PLANE WAS OFF COURSE

"A serious mistake in airmanship" led to the crashing of the Sunderland flying-boat in which the Duke of Kent lost his life in Scotland on August 25.

The House of Commons was informed yesterday in a written reply by Sir Archibald Sinclair, Secretary for Air, that this was one of five findings by a Royal Air Force Court of Inquiry.

The aircraft was off the prescribed course and was flying too low.

JAPANESE LEAVE TWO ISLANDS

RAIDS IN ALEUTIANS

WASHINGTON, Wednesday. — The Japanese appear to have abandoned Attu and Agattu Islands, in the Aleutians, the United States Navy Department announced to-night. The communiqué said that reconnaissance by U.S. aircraft "has failed to detect any signs of continued enemy occupancy and activity on Attu and Agattu for several weeks. In the latter part of September Army aircraft bombed Attu, destroying most of the buildings on the island, and the study of photographs made during the raid revealed no trace of the enemy on Attu at that time. A similar situation has been observed on Agattu.

"Attacks by Allied aircraft on Kiska continue. On October 5 Army bombers dropped many bombs on the camp area. Hits were made on a seaplane hangar, and six enemy seaplane fighters were shot down."

PAWN TERMS HITCH

ANOTHER CONFERENCE

Following the withdrawal, at the meeting on Monday of the Dublin Corporation, of Councillor W. H. Beirne's motion calling for an inquiry into the buisness of pawnbroking in Dublin, an unexpected hitch, apparently, has occurred regarding the terms of settlement of the pawn-shops' strike. The hitch, it is learned, is concerned with the position of apprentices. The pawnbrokers have called for another conference, under the auspices of the Department of Industry and Commerce, and it will be held to-day, under the chairmanship of Mr. D. O'Sullivan, of the Department. Strike pay is to cease to-morrow, and the men are to resume work on Monday, unless something unforeseen occurs.

OSNABRUCK BOMBED

Osnabruck, one of the Ruhr key-towns, which was heavily bombed last month, was revisited on Tuesday night. The British communiqué yesterday stated: "A strong force of our bombers last night made a concentrated attack on the industrial and railway town of Osnabruck. Six of our aircraft are missing."

GERMAN THREAT TO CHAIN PRISONERS

BRITISH RESERVE RIGHT OF ACTION

THE British War Office last night announced that, if the Germans carry out their threat to "put in chains" 2,500 officers and men captured at Dieppe, the Government "will have to consider their future action."

Both threat and rejoinder came as sequels to last Saturday night's British ten-man raid on the Channel island of Sark. Details of the raid were given in last night's British communiqué by way of reply to the German High Command's report issued earlier in the day.

In that report the High Command stated that at Sark a German non-commissioned officer and four men were tied up with thin, but strong, cords, the tieing being "deliberately planned."

COMMANDO RAID ON SARK

"A small-scale raid was made last Saturday night on the Island of Sark," said a British Combined Operations communiqué yesterday. "It was one of many such operations which are successfully and frequently carried out, and about which nothing is normally said. But since the enemy have, from ulterior motives, announced the raid, with the addition of inaccurate details, the facts are now issued.

"The main purpose of this raid was to obtain first-hand information about suspected ill-treatment of British residents in the island. As a result of this, these suspicions have been confirmed by the seizure of a proclamation signed Knackfuss, Oberst Feldkommandant. This states that all male civilians (a) not born in the Channel Islands, (b) not permanently resident there, between the ages of 16 and 70, have been deported to Germany, together with their families.

"This deportation took place last week at the shortest notice, and 900 men were conscripted from Guernsey. Four hundred are still to go, and it is expected that there will be more from Jersey than there will be from Guernsey.

"Eleven men of Sark were warned to go last week, but two committed suicide, and only nine left.

"The total British raiding forces consisted of ten officers and men. We suffered no casualties.

"Five prisoners were taken, of whom four escaped after repeated struggles, and were shot while doing so. One was brought back to this country. He has confirmed these deportations, and has stated that they were for forced labour."

Sark, with a normal population of 570, lies six miles east of Guernsey. It is three miles long and a mile and a half wide, and is almost entirely rockbound. The Channel Islands were demilitarised and partially evacuated in June, 1940, after the collapse of France.—(Press Association.)

GERMAN CHARGE

PRISONERS BOUND

The German account of the British commando raid on Sark, and the threat that all British prisoners taken at Dieppe will be put in chains from mid-day to-day, were given in yesterday's High Command communiqué.

After recalling the discovery of an alleged British order on the binding of German prisoners at Dieppe and the denial of the War Office, the communiqué (quoted by Reuter) states that German prisoners who were later freed have since declared that they were, in fact, bound by their captors, their hands being tied together for periods of from ten minutes to an hour and a half.

Describing the Sark raid, it continues:—"In the early hours of the day—October 4—sixteen British fell on a German working party consisting of a non-commissioned officer and four men. These men were tied up in their shirts with a thin, but very strong, cord, and were prevented from putting on more clothes. They were led off to the beach. When the German soldiers resisted this improper treatment, the non-commissioned officer and one man were killed by bullets and bayonets and another soldier was wounded. These facts are confirmed by a sapper who escaped.

"The investigation has shown that the tieing-up was deliberately planned. The German High Command thus possesses unimpeachable proof that both declarations by the British War Office of September 2, 1942, were untruthful.

REPRISAL THREAT

"The High Command, therefore, feel obliged to order that from mid-day on October 8 all British officers and men taken prisoner at Dieppe will be put in chains. This measure will remain in force until the British War Office proves that in future it will issue truthful statements on the binding of German prisoners of war, and also that it has acquired sufficient authority to see that its orders are carried out by its troops.

"In future, all British terrorists and sabotage troops, and their accomplices, who do not behave like soldiers, but like bandits, will be treated as such by the German troops, and will be ruthlessly mown down wherever they appear."

BRITISH REPLY

The British War Office states:—"Inquiries were instituted after the Dieppe raid. All German prisoners of war brought back to the United Kingdom were interrogated, and unanimously declared that they had not had their hands tied, and that they had been given humane treatment.

"This statement can be proved by the German Protecting Power. Any of the prisoners can be seen by representatives of the German Protecting Power to confirm this. The evidence which the enemy has adduced rests on their unsubstantiated assertion.

"There is full evidence of the humane treatment of prisoners of war by British troops, and if the German Government carry out the threats mentioned in their communiqué the British Government will have to consider their future action."

BOMBS THROWN IN BELFAST

Two bombs were thrown at the Cullingtree Road Police Station, Belfast, last night in an attempt to wreck the barracks. At 9.30 a small bomb exploded outside the barracks, causing no damage. An hour and a half later a heavier bomb was thrown at the main entrance, blowing a large hole in the pavement and injuring Alex. Mawhinney (17), of Grosvenor road. Streets in the neighbourhood were cordoned off by police immediately after the second explosion, but no arrests were reported up to a late hour.

Eat without Pain
no more Acidity-no more Flatulence

Perhaps your stomach is still struggling with your last meal. You're gasping with wind round the heart and doubled up with indigestion. Why? Because your stomach is always too acid. It sours every mouthful you eat. It turns meat into leather.

You can stop these agonising attacks this very day by taking 'Milk of Magnesia' Tablets. They relieve acidity and sourness at once. No matter what you eat, it remains sweet and digestible.

Your stomach makes easy work of digesting it. No sour repeating, no heartburn, not a trace of flatulence, not a twinge of your old agony.

What about your next meal? Are you going to submit to torture when one or two 'Milk of Magnesia' Tablets will save you? Make that meal the test. Get a box of the tablets now and have them in readiness. You'll be thankful you tried them.

Neat flat boxes for the pocket, 6d. and 1/-. Also family sizes, 2/- and 2/6 everywhere.

MILK OF MAGNESIA TABLETS

Improved Prices in Galway.—Prices showed an all-round improvement at Galway October fairs compared with last month. Milch cows brought up to £40 and stores from £18 to £26.

The Price of Oats.—Donegal County Committee of Agriculture has adopted a motion asking for an immediate inquiry into the price of oats and the relative prices of oatmeal.

Ruby Loch for Chief Race at Limerick

THE Limerick meeting this afternoon will be welcomed by Southern racegoers, who have not had many meetings of late. The programme is a varied one, with the Munster National Steeplechase the chief event. Slang runs instead of St. Martin and, as winner of the Maiden Plate at Fairyhouse, must hold a big chance, but may not concede the weight to Ruby Loch, who is given preference. Selections:—

Greenpark Hurdle—Caughoe.
Adare Hurdle—Bricett.
Shannon Flat Race—Camerlone.
Munster Steeplechase—Ruby Loch.
Ardnacrusha Flat Race—Commissioner.
Limerick Flat Race—Gyldennis.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Milkman Remanded.—At Kilmainham yesterday, John Brady, stated to be a native of Hill of Down, Co. Meath, was remanded in custody on a charge of embezzling £57 2/9 when employed as a milkman by Mr. Henry B. Fottrell, Castleknock.

Sheep Prices in Cork.—An early clearance at good prices was effected at Marsh's sheep sales in Cork yesterday. Wm. Danlea, Fermoy, obtained top price for shearling ewes, selling a pen at £6 each; other lots made £5 15/- down to £4 5/-. Top price of £4 14/6 for lambs was made by Dan O'Leary, Cloghroe.

Two Troopers Sentenced.—At Kilmainham District Court, Troopers John Murphy and James Kane, of the Defence Forces, were each fined £5, or, in default, two months' imprisonment, for the illegal possession of wearing apparel, the property of another trooper.

Candle Stealing.—At Stranorlar District Court, John McBride, Chapel street, Stranorlar, received a suspended sentence of six months, with hard labour, for the larceny of two packets of candles from the store at Stranorlar Railway Station.

£100 Border Fine.—A scene on a road near the border had a sequel at Stranorlar District Court yesterday, when Hugh Bradley, Drumcannon, Killygordon, was fined £100 for bringing eggs, spirits and butter to a place for the purpose of exportation, and £10 for assaulting and obstructing a Customs officer.

Stealing Motor Tyres.—Judge Sealy, at Nenagh Circuit Court, sentenced Michael McGrath, Knockinglass, Ballymackey, and Joseph Harrigan, Knockalton, to three months' imprisonment, with hard labour, for the larceny of six motor lorry tyres the property of Michael Droney, Ballinaclough, Nenagh. Both the accused pleaded guilty.

Mail Bag Robbery Alleged.—Charged at a special court in Castlerea, Co. Roscommon, with stealing a Post Office mail bag containing £35 5/-, the property of the Minister for Posts and Telegraphs, Henry Jackson and Patrick Corcoran, both of Church road, Castlerea, were remanded until the 19th inst.

Mary Hayden Memorial Night.—The Women's Social and Progressive League are holding a "Mary Hayden Memorial Night" to-night at their rooms in Lincoln Chambers. Many friends and colleagues of this great feminist have promised to speak, and the list of speakers will include Professors Mary Macken and Agnes O'Farrelly, Miss A. Phelan, B.L.; Mrs. E. Humphries, Mrs. Walsh and Mrs. O. Tierney.

CARBIDE SOON

It is expected that stocks of Irish-made carbide will be on the market by the end of October. The carbide, which is being manufactured at Askeaton, Co. Limerick, is of the 50/80 mm. type, which is used almost exclusively for home lighting and large installations generally.

"I am afraid we have no good news for cyclists so far," a representative of Messrs. Charles Tennant and Co. (I.F.S.), Ltd., told our reporter yesterday. "The smaller type carbide, of the 8/15 mm. type, is not being produced at the moment." He added, however, that it is likely that some factories will again follow their usual practice of grinding down the larger carbide and repacking it for cyclists.

There has been no carbide manufactured in Eire for the past five months, and the present manufacturers are finding difficulty in obtaining drums in which to pack it. The demand also has increased, as current shortages have driven many people to resurrect old lighting sets and cycle lamps. A further demand has been created by the fact that acetylene welders can no longer procure dissolved acetylene for their outfits and are falling back on lump carbide.

1,082 BOMBERS LOST IN NINE MONTHS

After stating that 1,082 bombers had been reported lost over Germany and Northern France during the past nine months, Sir Archibald Sinclair, British Secretary for Air, assured the House of Commons yesterday that Bomber Command took every precaution against unnecessary risks in night operations over the Continent.

GREYHOUND SALE AT HAROLD'S CROSS

In the trials which preceded the sale of greyhounds by Messrs. Goff and Co. at Harold's Cross Park yesterday Mr. M. Divilly's Bay's Dash was timed 30.49. The bidding for him was exceedingly brisk, and he headed the returns at 235 guineas. It was a very good sale, but in many cases the reserves were too high, but for which a number of unsold lots would have been disposed of. The date of the next sale has been changed from November 11 to November 4, so as to avoid clashing with the Belsize Cup Meeting. Gns.

HARRY KERNOFF EXHIBITION

THE PICTORIAL EYE

Mr. Harry Kernoff, R.H.A., has probably a quicker eye for the pictorial possibilities of the things he sees than almost any other of our artists. Cabs and cranes—steel cranes—groups of islands and ranges of mountains, scattered cottages in Connemara, and rows of ribbon-built houses near Dublin, peasant types and city types, whatever the subject it seems to turn into a characteristic work in almost as little time as it takes to say Jack Robinson—or Harry Kernoff!

The quality has its defect, which is the danger of formula, but at Mr. Kernoff's exhibition of old and new paintings, opened by Mr. F. H. O'Donnell at the Studio Arts Club, 13 Harcourt street, on Monday, it is pleasant to see how varied are the effects achieved. If there is a Kernoff formula it is elastic in its application. As a matter of fact, there is only one element which is common to the make-up of all the sixty-odd oil pictures and water-colours, and that is the substitution of flat passages of luminous colour for the precisely noted modulation of atmospheric effect. For the rest, there is an immense range of observation, there is clean handling and a kind of happy vivacity that makes one wonder why Mr. Kernoff is not more frequently employed as a mural decorator. The sense of fun—the result of very clever drawing—in, for instance, "Dublin Cab," is quite infectious. But the artist has his more reticent and more quietly poetic moods, too, and studies like "Beech Copse, North Bray," and "Old Barn, near Enniskerry," and "Clare Islands from Foynes Island," have genuine distinction, and suggest that when it comes to Irish landscape the apparently care-free artist's heart is no farther from his sleeve than anybody else's. And, similarly, for all the eccentric and out-of-the-way types that tempt Mr. Kernoff's pencil, his "straight" portrait called "The Irish Volunteer" shows that he has no less command in that type of work.

This should be a very successful exhibition.

FILMS IN EDUCATION

The Department of Education considers the formation of an adequate library of instructional films essential before it can officially recommend their use to teachers. This was announced at a meeting last night of the recently formed Teachers' Group of the Children's Film Committee, at the Irish Film Society's offices, 5 North Earl street, Dublin.

Mr. E. Toner said that in every country in Europe the projector was used in schools.

Mr. C. B. Parker said that he had been using films in his school for a number of years, and thought they taught more than text books.

MONASTERY OF OUR LADY OF CHARITY OF REFUGE AND MAGDALEN ASYLUM, LOWER GLOUCESTER STREET, DUBLIN.

On SUNDAY, 11th OCT., 1942.

A CHARITY SERMON, In Aid of the above Institution will be Preached in the PRO-CATHEDRAL, MARLBOROUGH STREET, At 12 o'clock Mass, By the REV. J. E. McGRATH, D.D., O.CARM.

ANOTHER APPEAL Will be made at the same hour (12 o'clock) in the CHURCH of ST. AGATHA, NORTH WILLIAM STREET, By the REV. DENIS REDMOND, O.S.A.

THE "COLLECTIVE MOTHER"

SCHEME OF CHARITY

The St. Vincent de Paul and other charitable societies will co-operate in any movement to implement the "poor streets adoption" suggestion made by Aodh de Blacam at the society's annual meeting on Tuesday night.

The society, whose offices are at 30 South Anne street, Dublin, would welcome offers from well-to-do families to assist poor families whose circumstances have been investigated by the society and who can be recommended as cases worthy of assistance. Such help should be offered for a definite period, say, six or twelve months, and should supplement any assistance already given by the authorities.

"The organising assistance for localities for poor streets presents many difficulties, but there is nothing to prevent a beginning being made," an official of the society said yesterday. "The society and other charitable bodies would be very willing to co-operate in such a movement." The Dublin branch is to consider the proposal and may formulate a definite scheme.

An experiment along these lines has been going on for the past year in a north Dublin parish, and has proved reasonably successful from many angles. In this case (writes a correspondent, "C. J. T.") of an individual well-to-do family taking responsibility for an individual poor family, a group of several families or sets of people agrees to be a sort of "collective mother" to two or three poor families. Some of these groups are connected with parish organisations of one kind and another. In all, about twenty very poor families are looked after in this way. The system works through selected visitors, who convey necessities to those in want, such as clothes, groceries, footwear, food. These have been pooled at intervals by the groups the visitors represent. There are actually some cases also of individual responsibility, so that the two ideas are by no means mutually exclusive. The formula upon which the experiment is based is very simple.

LAW TERM SERVICE

On the opening of the Michaelmas Law Term, a Service of Intercession and Praise will be held in St. Michan's Church, Church street, on Monday next, at 10.15 a.m. The Service will be conducted by the Rev. R. J. Kerr, M.A., assisted by the Rev. R. M. May, M.A., and the Rev. T. Byers, M.A. The choir of the King's Hospital will lead the singing. All members of the legal profession and their friends will be welcome and it is hoped that solicitors will be able to arrange for the attendance of members of their staffs.

Russia's Stand

It is a week ago since Herr Hitler promised the German people that Stalingrad would be captured; but so far the city has shown no sign of early capitulation. The siege of Stalingrad—if it can be termed a siege—has been in progress for more than five weeks. During that period Marshal von Bock, the German commander, has flung great masses of men and machines into his offensive; but the Russians, who had been forced back from the Don with apparent ease, suddenly turned at bay, and among the smoking ruins of Stalingrad proved once again that, however perfect the mechanical paraphernalia of war may become the thing that ultimately matters is human courage. No doubt, Stalingrad will fall eventually. Already the proud city that had arisen on the banks of the Volga and was one of the monuments to Soviet industry and enterprise, has been reduced to rubble; but the Russians still are fighting in its defence, and every heap of débris has been turned into a miniature fortress. According to yesterday's reports Marshal von Bock has been bringing up battalion after battalion of reserves in troop carrying aeroplanes in an effort to dislodge the Russian defenders; but Marshal Timoshenko's men are experts in this type of warfare, for which no provision was made by Clausewitz or Bernhardi. The defence of Stalingrad may continue for a week or for a month. Whatever happens now, one of Marshal Timoshenko's objectives has been achieved: he has gained priceless time. Herr Hitler stated in his speech in Berlin last week that Germany's military programme for 1942 included the complete conquest of the Black Sea littoral and the capture of the Grozny oilfields. Russia's strategy has been wholly defensive; but the Soviet High Command has contrived to delay the German time-table, just as it delayed it last year in the case of Moscow and Leningrad, with the result that a military decision before the beginning of the Russian winter is virtually impossible. So many German troops have been tied up in and around Stalingrad that the offensive against the Caucasus has been slowed down considerably. During the last month the German forces have advanced only a few miles towards the south, and in the Mozdok area their progress has not exceeded ten miles. In the meantime, Marshal Timoshenko has been able to mount two offensives—one to the north and the other to the south of Stalingrad. These offensives were in the nature of desperate undertakings, designed admittedly to relieve the pressure on Stalingrad, and they have been made at a heavy cost. Nevertheless, to some extent, at any rate, they have served their purpose. Stalingrad remains in Russian hands. Only a short time remains before the onset of the Russian winter. The Germans may manage to establish themselves on the line of the Volga before the end of the present month; but it is most unlikely that they will be able to attack either Leningrad or Moscow in any force. Consequently, the German High Command must prepare itself for another winter of inactivity in Russian conditions, which, according to Herr Hitler and Marshal Goering, will make heavy demands on the fortitude of the German armies. In short, the war will not be over this year. No doubt, Herr Hitler's generals have profited by their bitter experiences of last winter. The German forces will not suffer nearly so heavily as they suffered last year; and they probably will be able to launch another full-scale offensive in the spring. On the other hand, Great Britain and the United States will have another period of comparative quiet in which to mobilise their resources against the great clash that, sooner or later, must come. So far, President Roosevelt and Mr. Winston Churchill have managed to defy popular clamour in favour of a second front on the European Continent; and it is fairly obvious now that they do not propose to take offensive action until the spring. Huge Anglo-American forces are being built up, and eventually will be brought into action; and the fact that this accumulation of armed strength has been possible is due, in the first instance, to the astonishing powers of endurance of the Russian soldier.

Hot Baths

Those who bathed every day in the years when fuel for the heating of water was plentiful, probably regarded themselves as more virtuous than the Saturday night bathers, and as very decidedly superior to those who seldom bathed at all. To-day, it is a patriotic duty to luxuriate in the sensuous comfort of a warm tub as infrequently as is compatible with sanitary decency. Thus, the virtue of the past has become the vice of the present. In Ireland, the hardy may take as many cold baths as they please without offence to the gas company, the Electricity Supply Board, or the controller of the domestic stocks of coal, turf or wood blocks; but once a week, and then with water no higher than five inches in the bath, has been proclaimed as sufficient if the ablution in warm water is mainly for the purpose of cleansing the skin. Across the Channel the public is being asked to economise in the use of water as well as fuel, so that even the regular cold bath has become a luxury—while soap has been rationed for some months and is, consequently, a commodity to be used with discretion. All this must be very comforting to the schoolboy who never saw much use in washing, anyway, and the daily bather probably is no worse off than ever he was. While the remains of ancient civilisations indicate that a most elaborate ritual of bathing was a feature of Roman and Egyptian society, the inclusion of baths in private houses and their frequent use by citizens are, so far as these islands are concerned, a comparative novelty, dating only from Victorian times. Two or three hundred years ago bodily cleanliness was not such a fetish as it was recently, up to the time when fuel became scarce. Even sea bathing was an exceedingly rare activity. Those who were so eccentric as to immerse their bodies in water proceeded for the purpose to inland spas, such as Bath or Harrogate in England, or as Lucan, Lisdoonvarna or Ballynahinch in Ireland. Then came the cultivation of cleanliness as a virtue, while the health-giving properties of the sea were commended by the medical profession. The popular use of water for something other than drinking, coupled with the great advances made in sanitary arrangements generally, undoubtedly had a notable influence on the health of the community. Diseases such as smallpox almost disappeared. It does not follow that the curtailment of daily bathing will be reflected in the future statistics of the Department of Public Health. The ordinary man and woman can maintain a reasonable standard of cleanliness with one good hearty bath per week. There always was an element of snobbishness about the daily bath, despite the tradition that a peer of the realm, no less, committed suicide rather than subscribe to the custom when it was gaining favour in Victorian England.

NEEDS OF NURSES

The Irish Nurses' Organisation has written to the Minister for Local Government asking him to receive a deputation to discuss the needs of the nursing profession, and especially some form of pension for nurses.

The organisation has sent a copy of Studies, in which Professor Henry Moore's article embodies most of the important points. In its letter, it has quoted from Sir Joseph Glynn's comment that the first step towards a solution of the problem is the appointment of a committee of inquiry to hear evidence on the entire subject and to draft a report. This report would contain the main provisions to be embodied in an Act to be considered in the Dail.

So far the organisation has had no reply from the Minister.

A Social Committee has been formed to raise funds for the purchase of a suitable block of buildings for a nurses' club, and it is hoped that plans will be well advanced by the spring of 1943. It has been suggested that some charitably-disposed and socially-minded person might make a donation sufficient to purchase the building.

COUPON VALUE IN FURS

Any fur is worth its price to-day, although the average figure has risen to about 50 per cent above the pre-war value. A member of the trade, however, has pointed out that this increase in price is less, if anything, than that of many other commodities.

For those prepared to pay for it, a fur coat saves coupons—only 12 are needed for a full-length coat, whereas a cloth coat demands the surrender of 25 coupons. This is due to the foresight of the trade, who bought wisely before rationing came into force, and thus had ample stocks of furs in the country. There are very good supplies of furs in Eire, and there is no restriction on imports from England; but there has been a distinct falling-off in the trade in luxury furs, however, and Russian sable now is unprocurable. Mink can be bought, but few people at present have the money to spend on it.

All skins in coats costing up to £60 are selling well, such as Indian lamb, Canadian squirrel, Persian lamb and musquash, while silver fox is as popular and fashionable as ever.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ROUAULT

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—It has already been placed on record—by Mr. C. P. Curran in the March, 1942, issue of Studies—that that great Irish religious artist, the late Michael Healy, "was profoundly interested in the sombre genius of Rouault." From conversations I had with Healy in the weeks preceding his death a year ago, I can myself add confirmation of the fact of that interest. And as, even at present, it is possible that some echo of the controversy which has arisen over the Dublin Corporation's rejection of Rouault's "Christ and the Soldier" for the Municipal Gallery may reach the ears of the venerable French artist, I think it would please him to know—and should, therefore, be recalled—that the man who for forty years most worthily interpreted the religious sentiment of the Irish people in art thought highly of his work and was deeply interested in its implications from the point of view of the development of religious art in Ireland.—Yours, etc.,

THOMAS MACGREEVY.

Dublin, October 6th, 1942.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—My friend Mr. Keating thinks Rouault's "Christ and the Soldier" is not a work of art, and that "it is naive, childish and unintelligible." I happen to think it is a work of art, charged with deep religious experience, and of high, if unusual, technical accomplishment. Time and trained public opinion will decide that issue, but meanwhile let us see from the mere facts of Rouault's life if Mr. Keating is even probably right.

Rouault is now a man of seventy-one. Since he was thirteen he has been continuously engaged in the arts—first, until he was twenty, in stained glass, then painting in oils, gouache and pastels, engraving, etching, working in ceramics and even doing some sculpture—a misspent life, surely, if, at the height of his power, he thinks he is producing a work of art and is mistaken. He is, it is true, only a workman's son—but Mr. Keating will not hold this against him—born in 1871 in a Paris cellar when the guns were bombarding the city, and he lived many years in poverty, an obstinate recluse, perfecting what he thought was his art, and disdaining official recognition. Yet he was an early and intimate friend of Léon Bloy—his opposite number in letters—and of Huysmans, names not unknown in Catholic and European literature, and later of Jacques Maritain, a writer almost as distinguished in esthetics as in Catholic philosophy. Prima facie, therefore, I would expect him personally to be not childish, but intelligent and intelligible, not labelling things wrongly.

But what of his painting? I may be wrong. Perhaps his long study at the Ecole des Beaux Arts as the favourite pupil of Gustave Moreau, who prophesied great things of him, his Chenevard and D'Ivry prizes, his medal at the Paris Exhibition of 1900—these may have been a series of misjudgments on the part of himself and his juries. Or perhaps he miscarried since, and that the directors of the French, German and American Galleries—and quite recently of the Tate—have still further blundered in purchasing the work of this naive painter of our childish and unintelligible picture. These may have been the mistakes of individuals. How comes it, then, that this mistaken artist is the subject of special attention in Paris in 1937, when the two great exhibitions of that year—the Retrospective and the Maitres de l'Art Independant—were magnets that drew the whole artistic world, except, perhaps, some of the members of our Municipal Art Advisory Committee? This latter exhibition in the Petit Palais was the offering of the Paris Municipality to the art world. Its committees had some authority. They included the Ministers for Foreign Affairs and for Education, the Directeur-Général des Beaux Arts and seven Academicians, some of them not unknown in Dublin as MM. Louis Gillet and Paul Valery. Its executive committee of experts included M. Paul Jamot, a former Director of the Louvre, who lectured in recent years to the Friends of the National Collections. These were the men who not merely invited Rouault to exhibit, but devoted an entire room to forty-two examples of his work, including four religious subjects. One of them had the same theme as the picture which the Art Advisory Committee prefers that the citizens of Dublin should not be permitted to possess.

I have said that Léon Bloy is Rouault's opposite number in literature, Daumier being his immediate ancestor in art. I mean by this that the same burning indignation against our social disorder which fired Bloy lies at the heart of Rouault's painting. He is outraged by the cruelty and egotistic cynicism of men. He debunks many pleasures, but they are the pleasures of those who satisfy them by the suffering and death of their fellows. In his religious work, which occupies a great share of his activity, the same exasperation enters on another plane, where he sees Divinity also maltreated. Maritain, having spoken of his "admirable, austere, scrupulous and heroic rectitude," goes on to speak of "the living hidden spring of his art, his intense religious sentiment, which unveils the Divine image in the abject and abandoned creatures of our society, on whom he spends himself in pity. Religion is the origin of his tenderness and of his revolt and hatred of every sort of Pharisaicism." . . . . "This pathetic art of his is of profoundly religious significance." Charged as it is with indignation as with pity, I do not say that its proper place, any more than a Rembrandt, is in a church, though M. Focillon, Professor of Fine Arts at the Sorbonne, finds him a "modern follower of the painters of the 'Mirror of Penitence' and possessed of a sort of sombre Dominican ardour fit to animate a great Christian wall." But it stands in direct relation with Gothic art, and, if the majority of the Advisory Committee which advised the City Manager to decline this gift were as familiar as they should be with our own Gothic sculpture in Kilkenny and the very Rouaultesque Ecce Homo or Great Connell, I think they would have advised differently. When the editor of the Catholic Herald recently chose three of Rouault's pictures—one of them from Father D'Arcy's Campion College at Oxford—to illustrate the Passion Week issue of his paper, he was better advised.—Yours, etc.,

C. P. CURRAN.

Dublin, October 7th, 1942.

NATIONAL GALLERY

At a meeting of the Board of Governors and Guardians of the National Gallery of Ireland yesterday there were present:—Mr. Justice Murnaghan (in the chair); Mr. Dermod O'Brien, P.R.H.A.; Mr. Joseph Connolly, Chairman, Board of Works; Professor William Magennis, M.A.; Mr. Joseph Holloway, F.R.I.A.I.; Mr. Sean Keating, R.H.A.; Mr. Lucius O'Callaghan, R.H.A.; Mr Albert Power, R.H.A.; Mr. John Burke, and the Director, Dr. George Furlong, Ph.D.

The following purchases were made:—Oil picture, "Archimedes and Hiero of Syracus," by Sebastiano Ricci; oil picture, "The Holy Family," by Salviati; miniature, "Samuel Lover, R.H.A.," by himself; water colour, "O'Connell Street," by Michael Angelo Hayes, R.H.A.

A RARE COLLECTION

The Master of a Dublin hospital stood in the window of a St. Stephen's Green saleroom yesterday afternoon holding an Elizabethan rapier. Inside a director of the Abbey Theatre was seen in deep conversation with a university professor concerning the merits of a collection of old books; while others were viewing a collection of period furniture and fine art property, which will be offered to the public by auction to-day.

This is the most interesting collection of objets d'art that has come under the hammer since the sale last autumn of a larger accumulation of Chinese pottery and objects of Japanese, Continental and English art, collected by the late Mr. R. H. S. Truell. It consists of the ancient treasures of Granston Manor, County Leix, and is being offered for sale by Messrs. James Adam and Sons by permission of the executors of the former owner, the late Lord Castletown, of Upper Ossory, on the instruction of Capt. E. N. Fitz-Patrick. It is supplemented by some choice pieces of antique furniture and objets d'art, the property of Mrs. Ryan, Cart

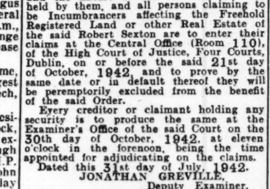
Smokers' 'Fur'
Now to detect it—How to prevent it.



Try this now. Run your tongue round your mouth — do you notice it . . . a rough woolly feeling. Smokers' fur has got a hold, and is staining your teeth. But don't worry, you can stop this fur from ruining the look of your teeth.
Dentists know smokers' fur is caused by excess acid in the mouth. Kill the acid and you shift the fur. What is the scientific way to destroy mouth acid? 12,000 dentists say 'Milk of Magnesia' brand antacid is the most effective antacid known. They recommend smokers to use the tooth-paste containing 'Milk of Magnesia' — the only toothpaste containing it — Phillips' Dental Magnesia.
Commence fighting mouth acid tonight. Get a tube of Phillips' Dental Magnesia and clean your teeth with it each night and morning. Then you'll feel the difference; no more morning mouth; no more stale breath. Instead you'll have teeth which look clean, feel clean, are clean; a sweet mouth to give new zest to smoking. A mouth that will say Good morning! and mean it.
PHILLIPS' DENTAL MAGNESIA
